agencies in promoting his will on earth. The scriptures are full of illustrations of this, 6. This is expressly affirmed in scripture: "There is no power but of God. The powers that be are ordained of God. Whosever, therefore, resisteth the power resisteth the ordinances of God." (Ramans, 13, 1, 20.)

Second—What ends do church and State sirve? The ultimate end of both is the glory of God; the proximate end, the glory of man kind. These ends are differently answere The State provides for their temporal welfare the church for their spiritual good. The Stat was ordained to realize the idea of justice the church was ordained to real as the ideas mercy. The one confines itself to earth and maintains the principles of rectitude among men; the other extends its benefits to eternity and reveals the grace of God. Third-How do these two, churca and State, stand related to each other? The conflicting opinions on this subject may be re-1. The ultramontane theory, which exalts he chief minister of the church above all 2. The Erastian theory, which makes the accepted. ad of the State the head of the church, nd ministers of religion officers of civil gov-3. The principle of independence of church and State, according to which each moves in its own sphere, without trenching upon the rights of the other. But though distinct, they are not to be too widely separated; they stand in close and intimate relation to one another. The State is bound to protect the church; to defend its rights; to enforce its contracts. They church, in turn, is bound to support the State by its prayers, its picty and virtue it inculcates.

Further than this, the church bears a message from God to all men, kings, subjects, rulers and citizens: "The God of Israel said the rock of Israel spake to him, he that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God." The State is a public persoc; is amenable to the authority, and must obey laws of God. It is the duty of the church o urge upon the State the observance of ublic virtue.
